

ArrayToVector

Write a function (named `ArrayToVector`) that can accept a pointer (to a dynamically allocated array), the size of that array, and returns a vector containing the elements of that array. The function should dispose of the array when it is finished with it. Be sure that your function can accept arrays of any type.

The header and implementation files should be in the folder named "ArrayToVector".
